

Mercury (Library of the Planets)

Your students will be fascinated by this exciting new series that explores the nine planets in our solar system. The books in this collection go into great detail to provide readers with interesting facts about each planet, including Earth. Cutting-edge information includes details of the February 2000 Endeavor mission, which used radar to create maps of Earth. The books will also give students a close-up view of many of the planets, courtesy of the photos sent back from the Voyager space probes and the Hubble Space telescope. This series is designed to touch upon several elementary school curriculum corollaries including Earth Science and Space Science. Young minds will surely be engaged as they learn more about space and its many mysteries. The second smallest planet in our solar system, Mercury is also very quick, orbiting the sun faster than any other planet. Students will learn about Mercurys extreme temperatures, its deep craters, and its giant scarps. With future Mercury missions planned later in the millennium, new discoveries are sure to be made on this interesting inner planet.
